REPORT

OF

THE SCHOOL BOARD

OF THE

TOWN OF PELHAM, N. H.,

FOR THE

YEAR ENDING MARCH 1, 1894.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

AUGUSTUS BERRY, . . . Term expires March, 1894.
HENRY S. RUSS, . . . Term expires March, 1895.
GEORGE S. BUTLER, . . . Term expires March, 1896.

REPORT.

Our judgments of Schools will be mainly as our idea of their object and end. It has been supposed that the State supports Schools simply for its own preservation. The question—How much the State should educate? has been raised. Some have said only in the primary studies and no more than the elements of these, merely the rudiments such as may come into use in the simple needs and intercourse of life. But if this is all, then it is hardly necessary that the State educate at all, for people will find a way to meet these simple necessities without any schools. Others have made this duty of the State to consist in the necessity of good and intelligent citizens. This is an important reason but it is not a complete one. The State will not attain the end it has in view, viz., the good citizen, unless it has a higher and more unselfish purpose, a larger view of its duty and privilege. It must remember that knowledge is a dangerous acquisition without a conscience, that intellectual culture without moral virtues will imperil the State. The State, while seeking the best intellectual culture and sparing no expense to secure it, should have as its end Character, the truest manhood and womanhood. The public schools are not for any specialty, but to lay foundations on which any department of knowledge that will enrich and bless humanity may build.

Children in them are to become conscious of their own intellectual and moral powers, and learn how to rightly use them. Most of the studies of school are not for any specific use, but for general discipline, that children may learn to think, form opinions, rightly answer the questions and solve the problems ever presenting themselves to the human mind. Education, then, is a responsible and serious matter, something that should not be trifled with, that should engross the best thought and effort of the State; irreverent, unskilled and ignorant hands should never be laid upon it. It should be understood that human nature has its laws of development as fixed as any plant in the natural creation, and violence is done to the life if these laws are not regarded. The story of the tortures of the Inquisition furnishes harrowing pages of history, but the story of the torture of children's minds and moral natures in the schools would be more harrowing. Whether the work of the schools shall be of the parrot or the machine type, or the natural and free unfolding of mind and heart under conditions fitting and favoring, depends upon the ideas of parents, committees and teachers upon that which constitutes education.

THE USE OF THE TEXT BOOK.

There is a need of a better understanding of this. The book is a necessity, but a greatly abused one. It is the beaten path that generations of scholars tread, without a thought of anything outside of its narrow limits; worse than this, there is no consideration of its proper use; it is hurried through; advance is estimated by the rapidity with which it is gone over; a mistake through and through. The text book is valuable only as a help to thoroughness. It is not necessary that it be completed, only that what is attempted should be thorough. A fragment mastered is better than the whole book skimmed over. Value does not consist in the amount, but the quality. Accurate knowledge is the only knowledge worth having. In a certain way inaccurate knowledge is worse than none.

HABITS.

The habits of the school affect the welfare of a lifetime. These relate to the manner of study, the power of application and observation, the ability to concentrate the attention and to investigate without preconceived notions or prejudice. Regularity and punctuality are qualities indispensable not only to school life but to all future success. Irregular attendance not only deadens the interest of the individual pupil but the whole school. The commencement of interest and progress on the part of a pupil often is coincident with the commencement of punctual and regular attendance, and such habits formed in the school will continue through life. Parents are not aware how much they injure their child by permitting irregularity in attendance.

THOROUGHNESS.

Scholars should be held to their work until they have a clear understanding of it and facility in its execution. Reading can be learned only by practice upon a sentence, paragraph or section till it is read correctly. Each study of the school should furnish a reading lesson. The ability to read any lesson should precede the recitation of it. There should be the same care in the reading of a problem, in reciting a rule or topics in geography and history, as in the lesson of the reading book. In all recitations, in the asking and answering of questions and the conversation of school, there should be the same regard to the enunciation, the tone and expression as in the reading lesson. So the teaching in language should not be limited to the language lessons, but to every expression of the scholar. The same method should be used in the teaching of writing. Every figure the scholar makes, every word he writes, all his written exercises of whatsoever kind, he must be taught to execute accurately, and required to write and re-write until it is manifest that he is careful and doing his best. The same thing should be insisted upon in all the carriage of the school-room, whether the scholar stands, sits, walks, in fine in all his bearings. Lessons of carefulness and thrift should be inculcated in the care of his own and that which is the town's or some other person's. Truth, justice, charity and benevolence should be taught in all the relations of pupils with one another and their teacher. Only thus can there be the formation of true manhood, womanhood and citizenship, such as constitute the prosperous and happy State. For such an end the Board of Education have labored.

THE WORK OF THE TEACHER.

The value of the school depends largely on the teacher. His work must be intelligent, earnest, conscientious, pervaded with a deep sense of accountability, entered upon in love, pursued to do good. In this work there should be constant progress in skill and effectiveness. The teacher should be deeply imbued with the spirit of this age of progress, and magnify his office. He should account his art the noblest of all arts. He should be enthusiastic and aim each day to do better. There has been marvellous advance in surgery during the last quarter of the century. The surgeon now can almost dismember the human system and then completely restore it. The people wonder at what he can do. But if the progress in the art of teaching were as clearly observed the wonder would be as great. A higher conception of the teacher and his work is now demanded. The educated and skilled teacher is needed. The time is past when it may be supposed that any person of a fair education and character is competent to teach our schools. The number wishing to teach is large, but the supply of suitable teachers is small, unequal to the demand, rendering it necessary for the Board of Education to experiment with the inexperienced, and to take not such as we want and the schools demand, but the best that can be obtained under the circumstances. The remedy for this must be found in a higher conception of the teacher's office and work in the popular mind.

CHEAP SCHOOLS.

There may be a place and necessity for other cheap things, but there is none, there can be none, for cheap schools. Cheap work is rarely profitable, in many instances it is disastrous ; it is always so in education. In public affairs there may be exigencies when expenses must be pruned down, but this should never be in education. Curtailing here is taking from the life blood of the public welfare. A community, town or state has character, position and power, as its educational institutions are fostered.

CONSTANT EFFORT.

As the price of civil liberty is eternal vigilance, so the interests of education demand unfailing watchfulness and constant care. The school-house, with all its appurtenances, must be kept from everything that mars or defiles. They must be frequently freshened with paint, and their natural wear and tear repaired. They must be kept so perfect that rudeness shall shrink from marring them. Every year should add something for convenience and beauty. Simple pieces of apparatus should be furnished for illustration and experiment.

THE EXALATION OF THE INTERESTS OF EDUCATION.

There needs to be created in the popular mind a deeper interest in the cause. It must be taken out of the inferior place it has held. No other officers chosen by the town are so important as those of education. No other town meeting of such interests as the school meeting. No appropriations of money should be so liberal as that for the schools. To be delinquent here is to be behind the advancing spirit of the age. Financial prosperity, general morality, character and public safety are all conditioned on keeping the cause of education not only at the front but on the advance. The Public Library is its hand-maid, and this will not be true, vigorous and strong, fulfilling its mission, unless its mistress, Public Education, shall be crowned and royally supported. In the labor to make the schools what they should be and give education its rightful place in the public regard, there must be large charity and unfaltering hope; we must remember that we can rarely secure the teachers we need for our schools. We must keep in mind the limited wages we pay, the difficulties that are encountered in the matter of board, and other essential things, that hinder and hamper the most faithful efforts. A situation is accepted in our schools only till a better is presented. When teachers become familiar with the work of our schools they leave for better positions, and the Board of Education is under the necessity from year to year or term to term of repeating the extra labor and effort and anxiety in starting teachers in the conduct of the schools. In this there is always, in either a greater or less degree, unavoidable loss. The Board are very thankful that they can report a year of such successful schools. In two of the schools the same teacher taught the entire year. In one there was a change each term; but there has been no term that was not in a good degree valuable, and we have had some teachers of more than usual merit, and we should consider the schools fortunate if those teachers could be retained another year.

SECOND ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE

Pelham Free Public Library.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

In accordance with the vote taken when the organization of the Trustees was perfected in March, 1892, the Trustees take pleasure in submitting their second annual report. One's expectations in regard to the increasing the number of volumes the past year have perhaps not been fully realized, but still, taking into consideration the general depression of business, the dulness of the times, and the many ways that people have had to resort to meet their expenses, we think we have made a good advance. We have increased the number of volumes in the library to 629, and in a short time will have money enough at our disposal to add 150 volumes more to the library. Besides this we have put some new book cases in the Town Hall at an expense of $32.00, which we think will make us ample room for books for the ensuing year; but if prosperity awaits us in the future, as we have every reason to believe it will, we shall want a library building with a capacity of holding thousands of volumes. We are in hopes that some of our wealthy citizens of Pelham, when they come to dispose of their large accumulations, will remember the needs of this free public library, and donate a sum of money for the purpose of founding a library building. By so doing, they will be doing an act which will entitle them to the lasting gratitude of every inhabitant of the town, and to every generation of inhabitants that shall come after them. Our sincere and heart-felt thanks are due to the memory of the late Moses Hobbs, who bequeathed the sum of one hundred dollars to be invested in books; also to the memory of the late Miss Phoebe A. Marsh, who also conditionally bequeathed the amount of one hundred dollars for the benefit of the library. We are also under obligations to Union Degree Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, of Lowell, Mass., who gave two entertainments at the Town Hall for the benefit of the library, whereby we realized the sum of forty-four dollars. We sincerely hope that this matter of a library building will not die out, but will be agitated to such an extent that we shall soon have a building that every citizen and every descendant of Pelham will point to with pride. We trust the town will appropriate the same sum of money for library purposes for the ensuing year as they appropriated for the preceding year. With this appropriation and the help we have every reason to believe will be extended from other sources we think we will show you a large increase in the number of volumes by the time the next annual meeting comes around. The circulation of books has largely increased the past year, and we have yet to find the person residing within the borders of the town who is not in favor of maintaining a free public library. Hoping for the same generous support in the future as in the past, we respectfully submit this report.
